Before writing a paper the researcher may solve some questions

To whom we are writing the paper?

Why we write this paper or article?

How to select a Topic?

The class talked through the various genre present in academic writing. Foremost discussed the empirical reports, Philosophical Discussions, scoping and scientific review, case study, evaluation reports, bibliographic analysis and critical reflections. Also presented some examples for all genres and types. At the end had a detailed session on the structure of a paper. The resource person had given a comprehensive idea of the structure with a format called IMRAD which incorporates Introduction, Method, Result and Discussion followed by a brief conclusion with reference.
