4. Discern ways to strengthen school based practice through joint discussions and planning.

Counselling Centre

Establishing the Counselling Centre was driven by the recognition of the increasing need for mental health support within the educational environment and the broader community. With the growing stress and pressures faced by students and staff, the college identified a gap in accessible mental health services. Additionally, the surrounding community, including the model school St. Antony's Mala, lacked adequate psychological support. This context highlighted the importance of having a dedicated space for counselling to address various mental health issues and promote overall well-being. The primary goal of the Counselling Centre at Jesus Training College, Mala, is to provide psychological support and guidance to students, staff, and community members. The practice aims to enhance the mental well-being of individuals through professional counselling services, addressing emotional, psychological, and social challenges they may face. The Counselling Centre at Jesus Training College, Mala, is managed by two certified counsellors, Fr. Raphael and Mrs. Sheena, who are experienced in providing psychological support. Referrals for counselling come from the Headmaster of the model school and nearby religious heads, ensuring that those in need are directed to the service. The centre is open to students and staff of the college, as well as community members, ensuring a broad reach of support. Follow-up sessions are provided to ensure continuous support for those in need. Additionally, the counsellors conduct seminars and lectures based on previous cases, contributing to the broader understanding and awareness of mental health issues within the community. The centre operates in a specially arranged room with adequate facilities, ensuring a comfortable and confidential environment for counselling sessions. These sessions are conducted every Saturday and are meticulously documented to maintain accurate records.
